Holiday Edition

Winter 2011

Holiday Blessings from FPIN!

Front: LuShawna, Tonya, and Cortni

Back: Lindsay, Denise, Christina, Sarah, and Ellen

As the holiday season approaches, we reflect on what has been a very busy year filled with many exciting accomplishments. Your network faculty and staff have visited 20 residency programs this year, conducting on-site workshops and addressing individual consulting needs. Results can readily be seen, as program participation rates set new records.

I know that the entire FPIN staff join me in thanking each of you for your support of the network throughout the year. Your enthusiasm for teaching and learning inspires us each day.

Cheers!

Tonya Wolff
Executive Director

PURLs

Over the course of 2010, the PURLs team has worked to begin the dissemination of PURL information out to the general FPIN membership and family medicine community through presentations at STFM and additional submissions for 2012. In addition, the group has added Dr. Goutham Rao, who will lead as the editor-in-chief for Diving for PURLs - the segment in Evidence-Based Practice. Dr. Rao brings significant experience to the group through his expertise in physician numeracy, and will be working with the team to improve faculty development skills across the network. Look for the physician numeracy content in our FPIN Institute in 2012! For more information or to get involved, please contact Cortni Cross at cortni@fpin.org.

Clinical Inquiries

The Clinical Inquiries project is pleased to introduce Dr. Gary Kelsberg as the new editor-in-chief. Dr. Kelsberg is a faculty member for the University of Washington at Valley Family Medicine in Renton. Dr. Kelsberg brings with him 10 years of experience writing, co-authoring, and editing CIs.

We are now recruiting for a deputy editor. If you are a faculty member who has been involved in CIs and is interested in this role, you can apply by sending your CV to CI@fpin.org.

A goal for the year ahead is to create education materials specifically directed at assistant editors and peer reviewers for personal development.

We have a great deal of excitement happening in the eMedRef project.

We are pleased to announce Robert C. Marshall, MD MPH MISM as the new editor-in-chief. Dr. Marshall is the Chief Medical Informatics Officer and the Medical Informatics Fellowship Director at the Madigan Army Medical Center in WA. Dr. Marshall is a talented, highly respected clinician and an award-winning teacher.

He has been an eMedRef senior editor for several years and brings with him both ample experience and many new ideas.

Look for BIG things!

Dr. Lyon is an assistant professor at the University of Colorado Family Medicine Residency. He has many years of experience in this project and with FPIN as an author, co-author, section editor, and workshop presenter. He is bringing many new ideas.

Dr. Jon Neher will be transitioning from HDA editor-in-chief to focus more on his current role as editor-in-chief for the Evidence-Based Practice journal.

2012 goals are to have more HDA modules on the FPIN Institute, as well as update the author instructions and continue to make them more user friendly. One important addition is that full text references will be required with each manuscript submitted for review.

The HelpDesk Answers project is pleased to announce Dr. Corey Lyon as the new editor-in-chief.
